Germany's Policy

Germany has pinned its hope, in this crisis, on two separate policies. She has tried to break the will of the peace front to act as a shield against further conquest in Europe, and at the same time, has held her armies poised on Poland's borders as an inducement to Britain to say she will not move to check Nazi aggression. Hitler feels the threat of war will drive Britain and France to give in to his demands.

He has shaken the big stick with which the peace front was to be splintered, but thus far it has not done all he wished. The terms of the Russian pact are a virtual political alliance between the Reich and the Soviet, coming short only of specified military aid. Russia has bound herself to refrain from co-operation with any group directly or indirectly aimed against Germany, which means she has chosen to come within the Nazi orbit instead of agreeing to a military alliance with Britain and France. Nor is there, as some hoped, any qualifying clause which would free Russia of her obligations if Germany attacked Poland or was guilty of any other aggression.

Britain, however, seems resolved to honor her obligations to Poland, should reason falter in the minds of Germany's rulers and the grim and tragic decision to plunge the world into war really be made by Hitler and his advisers.

In 1914, a divided cabinet and country forbade hero Sir Edward Grey to warn Germany, almost until it was too late, that an attack on Belgium meant that the full force of England's invincible strength would have to meet. No such wavering exists today. In clear, precise, categorical, unmistakable terms, England has said what she will do if Germany steps over the thin line which now separates peace from war. Germany can be blind to that solemn warning only if she really believes that what Germany does to Poland is no concern of Britain or France. And if Germany does mean that, it is clear that the nation Hitler raised to such a position of arrogant strength in Europe determined to blot out by force any barrier which still may remain to block it from being the undisputed master of the destiny of other peoples.

France, like Britain, does not want war, if it can be avoided without stabbing freedom in the back, and handing over Europe to the grim hegemony of a Germany inflamed by a thirst for power. Like Britain, she has told Hitler what she plans to do. Her decision to order partial mobilization of her troops is clear evidence of her national will. On all sides warning signals flash upon Hitler to stop it is too late. The logic of aggression will clearly lie upon Germany, and upon Germany alone.

The Manchester Guardian, organ-vote of British liberty, stated the whole case in a few pregnant sentences when it spoke of the tragic folly of German policy, rooted in the mistaken belief that free men will be ready to give up all they cherish so that the might of the Reich can be glorified.

"Not so much on the Nazis now as on the German people," it says, "rests the choice between peace and war; between the good neighbor and another attempted bout of 'expansion' by brute force. Twenty-five years after the beginning of the last disaster for Germany, what will their answer be, and how can we get the question fairly laid before them?"

Again, the Guardian declares: "There is the German army as well as the Nazis to reckon with, and there is testimony from returned visitors of weight and judgment that there are plenty of Germans who, even without encouragement from Hitler and his captains, still regard the destruction of the restored Poland as a national mission of which the seizure of Danzig would, of course, be not only the first step, but the inevitable master-stroke. If so Germany thinks and so Germany acts, then war will come, and not as a result of any traditional worship by this country of what John Bright called 'that foul idol' of Balance of Power, but simply because the Danzig settlement under the Versailles Treaty was not unjust, because the Poles are a people with a land of their own, which is not to be argued out of existence by past partitions or appeals to doctored history of the Teutonic Knights, and because the path of aggression must and shall be halted in the interests of all countries, small or great, including Germany herself. For only when aggression, by threat or by force, has plainly failed, will Germany's chance to show herself the good neighbor arrive."

Will Hitler and Germany believe that? If not, a dark prospect awaits mankind. The issues are too grave to let any word of winged passion or calculated malice upset the delicately poised scales in which the chances for peace are now anxiously being weighed in the balance.

Mr. King's Statement

The dark clouds now lengthening over Europe have cast their shadow over Canada as can be seen from the statement by Mr. Mackenzie King, Wednesday afternoon. Only the fact that the federal cabinet is already clothed by statute with power to take instant and drastic action to control our national life in the event of a sudden outbreak of war, has prevented parliament from being called to endow it with such extraordinary prerogatives.

But if it turns for the worse later place, and it seems as if all chance of a peaceful solution is at an end. Mr. King promises to summon an emergency meeting of the House of Commons, at the shortest notice, to formulate Canada's stand in these sombre days.

The prime minister spoke for all Canadians when he voiced the hope the scourge of war would not come upon the world. He equally spoke for them when he pointed the grave issues which now threaten freedom and drew attention to a conflict Canada cannot ignore. By quoting the exact words used by Britain to Germany in her official statement of policy, Mr. King implicitly associated this country with the British government in feeling "there is nothing in the difficulties that have arisen between Germany and Poland which would justify the conduct of a force involving a European war with all its tragic consequences." The British statement recognized that a war between Great Britain and Poland would not be limited to those two countries but would be in reality a "European war with all its tragic consequences," a war from which neither Britain nor France could long abstain.

It was not for Mr. King to say what Canada would do in such an emergency. Parliament alone can decide. Should it be convened in urgent session, the government will then lay its policy before it for analysis and endorsement.

A hopeful sign is that Dr. Manion, the Conservative leader, is showing the same readiness to co-operate with the prime minister as he did during the September elections. It has been Canada's happy experience that when the ominous clouds of a war come, party differences are swallowed up in a larger national unity. Thus Laurier assured Sir Robert Borden that Canada spoke with one voice when the great war began. It is to be expected other political leaders will follow Dr. Manion's example, and, in giving expression to any legitimate convictions they may hold, they will still act in such a way that the national unity of this country may be strengthened for any danger that may lie ahead, and not be split into factions because of it.

President Roosevelt's Position

All who remember the effect of President Roosevelt's message to Hitler at the time of the Czech crisis last year may be excused for wondering why he delayed issuing a similar appeal now. The answer is that the action recently taken by Congress to modify the terms of the neutrality bill had, in his own words, tied his hands and left him with "scarcely any power to make an American effort to prevent an outbreak of war."

Restive previously under these restrictions, the President may safely be assumed now to be waiting for an opportunity to exercise the more general powers of his office to intervene in the German-Polish dispute, when and where he may do the most good to the cause of peace. He is not the man to do nothing while the world may stagger into a brutal calamity.

While controversy over the neutrality bill shows how piece-meal and ineffective a bit of legislation it is. It is not a clear-cut, carefully thought out program. Rather it is a sort of bungling improvisation to suit changing events. The first neutrality bill was passed during the Abyssinian war to keep the United States clear of a conflict that seemed definitely to be a European quarrel and no concern of her own. Since then, the act has been revised several times, always in the light of a special situation, and without much greater clarity being given to the broad principles of American foreign policy, so that today even legal experts are hard put to say just what America can do or cannot do in war-time.

One thing is plain. The American Congress forbade the President to make any distinction between an aggressor state and the victims of aggression. He is to look upon the world with the impartiality of a recording angel. At the same

Nations are filled with spite these days. Not the old-fashioned type of professional spy devoting his life to his job, but men and women in offices and institutions, adding to their salaries the pocket-money of espionage or reporting as loyals.

IF YOU WANT TO BE A SPY? The recent New York conviction of a Nazi spy, based on a realistic depiction of the new type of professional spy works and is worked.

In France, so many spies have been arrested that a prohibition is made against reporting the proceedings.

For the professional branch of the Secret Service, the qualifications are as rigid as for an important commercial or official career.

Henry W. Lanier in "Secret Life of a Secret Agent," says prospective agents are required to learn:

Geography—every capital and key city in Europe and many Asia and Africa; complete details of their locations, harbors, sea and land defenses, railroads, highways, canals, water houses, gas plants, water supply, dams, bridges, roads, rivers, waterfalls, mountain passes, roadways, army posts, munition factories, steel plants, oil supplies, mines and factories.

All this to be memorized.

The above is not all. He must have fluency in at least four languages and more if possible; general knowledge of medicine, law, police, geography, chemistry, new inventions, current politics and trade conditions. From highly specialized text-books, constantly revised, he must be master of make-up,

WORKS phonography, photography, COLUMNING

LOCK-BREAKING, cipher systems. He must be expert in handling auto, airplanes, motor and sailing craft, horseback riding, swimming, shooting, sailing, climbing, sealing, sculling, swimming, jiu jitsu, welding, sandbag and dressing, and if necessary, methods of stealing, dredging and murdering without leaving traces. Any of this combination is liable to upset any given unit. There is also the standing difficulty of the inadaptability of the present mode of life to the requirements of a very large and commanding tub, where dimensions permit, may readily drown, and the shortened tub of limited fluid capacity, where those of extensive figures may come to a fatal end through cramps, no happy medium seems at present to be possible.

With the new metal article there may be developed a method by which the tub may be shortened or elongated as desired, so as to serve all types of physique. This is a very good idea, and should possess a sturdy receptacle for soap, where it may be placed when not actually in attrition, for the disappearance of the soap and the difficulty of recovery in opaque water is a scientific problem that needs not only the brain but also the skill of a chemist, and equanimity that perhaps only science in the end, can achieve.—From the Hamilton Spectator.

Good Outlook

Saskatoon can feel considerable satisfaction in the condition of the crops in its district for they are decidedly of good yield and seemingly excellent quality. On an average, observers say, they will run about 30 or 32 bushels to the acre, or considerably above the long-term average for the whole of the province.

For the province as a whole the position is not so good. While the production in the irrigation area and another area in the south, the yield will be below the long-term average of 18½ bushels to the acre, although it will be considerably better than last year.

For the central and northern areas of the province the yield will be above the long-term average value; certainly it will relieve what otherwise would have been a very disastrous condition.

On the whole, the outlook in the Saskatoon area is fairly satisfactory. There will be a good crop in the irrigation areas and others will be good from a revenue viewpoint, even though it is spent, a revenue of considerable size because of the price guarantees that are in effect. And very little of it will be drained off this year before it has a chance to circulate.—Saskatoon Star-Phoenix.

Some Bath Tub Problems

The whole subject of bathtubs requires revision and stabilization. It is difficult to approach the question without qualms, for domestic interests are so profoundly involved that nothing can be done without full approval from the domestic authority. The subject has obtained a new interest from the fact that metal tubs have been placed on the market, and the difficulty of deciding between metal and porcelain or some similar material is now open.

The metal tub is a popular product, naturally, its belligerent alliance with soap, when the combination is liable to upset any given unit. There is also the standing difficulty of the inadaptability of the present mode of life to the requirements of a very large and commanding tub, where dimensions permit, may readily drown, and the shortened tub of limited fluid capacity, where those of extensive figures may come to a fatal end through cramps, no happy medium seems at present to be possible.

With the new metal article there may be developed a method by which the tub may be shortened or elongated as desired, so as to serve all types of physique. Reactionaries Active

Editor, Bulletin: Stirring up trouble are being made in Canada to establish a so-called "national government" to be controlled by the business community, and who wants one, who will benefit, what steps are being taken to form it? These questions deserve serious study at this time particularly when federal elections are pending.

The outstanding advocates of a "national government" are industrialists, dealers, organizations and newspapers closely connected with the business circles of Canadian Big Business.

Heburn in Ontario has split away from the King Liberals and is preparing to enter the federal elections as an independent force, and is supporting the Conservative party, placing his support behind outstanding reactionary old guard members.

Manion in other parts of Canada has split away from the King Liberals and is supporting Heburn in Ontario and Quebec.

The Free Post, Globe and Mail, and Montreal Gazette are carrying on unceasing propaganda in behalf of a "national government."

It can be taken for granted that the anti-social, reactionaries, "national government" candidates will use different labels in different constituencies.

Through utilizing all these means Big Business hopes to be able to capture a majority of members in the House at Ottawa who will carry out its dictates.

Business wants a "national government" model. Such a government would carry through railway amalgamation, the creation of a single tax on the profits of the leadership League to abolish local and provincial governments, it would take away the power of labor to organize, and see new third party movements growing which threaten its supremacy.

The tide of democratic indignation which demands that the rich should not profit of monopolies and profits.

It is proposed to locate the new exhibition grounds in the west end parks.

The public schools of the city will re-open early next month, and it is believed a record attendance mark will be set up.

How does Big Business propose to extend its influence? It cleverly refrains from putting all its eggs into one basket. It is working along several lines, attacking from different angles.

Canadian voters be vigilant. We must be prepared to root out and expose this reactionary government.

We must work for the defeat of reactionary candidates, and the election of a government representative of the interests of the people.

FORT ST. JOHN

North Air Base Being Developed At Fort St. John

The Fort St. John airport, situated one mile west of the town, is fast becoming one of the north's main airports and planes are beginning to land there regularly. Officials say the field will be open by the fall shortly and it will soon be one of the finest air bases north of Edmonton.

Cutting is in full swing in the Fort St. John area and many of the farmers have already harvested and are ready for threshing. Farmers expect their crops to average between 30 and 40 bushels to the acre.

GLENDON

Bailey on the farm of John Stokey was the first grain to be threshed in the Glendon district last Friday. The crop of oats was harvested by Mr. Kryzanowski. Oats threshed on the farm of Wm. Wynnchuk ran 80 bushels to the acre and was threshed by Mr. Graham.

Fred Myers, formerly of Mayo and now a resident of Edmonton, is in the district renewing acquaintances with old friends.

MCLENNAN

Funeral services were held from the McLean Catholic church Wednesday morning for William Shy, who died Sunday following a short illness.

Mr. and Mrs. E. Hounds and daughter, Mabel, moved to Edmonton early in the week. Miss Hounds will be a nurse Sunday following a short illness.

RAWLIF

Mrs. Fred Scheidegger spent a few days with her daughter, Mrs. R. K. Colter, and family in Edmonton. Mr. and Mrs. Art Swanson came to town from Bellmore, Wash., and were guests of Mr. and Mrs. Jacob Boness.

GWYNNE

Cutting is general with prospects of a fair yield for early sown grain. Most of the grades are expected to be good, though some dryness late in the season has caused some to yield but not to ripen well.

No rain of any consequence has fallen for the past two months, and the soil is dry and dusty.

Barley services for Maria Alice Blackwood, 78, wife of F. O. Young of Blackwood, were held in the Lloydminster Monday afternoon for Mrs. Jessie Ellen Huxley, widow of the deceased. Services were held from St. John's church with Rev. Canon T. J. Hayes officiating. Mrs. Huxley was one of the old timers of the district.

B.C. PREMIER STARTS FLIGHT INTO ARCTIC

VICTORIA, Aug. 24.—Premier T. D. Patullo, British Columbia's 68-year-old premier, who five years ago adopted flying as his favorite method of travel, Wednesday set out on his most ambitious air voyage, a 5,000-mile round trip to the Arctic circle beyond the North Pole.

In a Canadian Airlines plane piloted by Captain W. G. Wilson and his co-pilot, the premier will stop at Alert Bay for refueling, then go to Prince Rupert, 500 miles up the coast.

On the return flight to Victoria via the Peace River, up the Mackenzie river valley and beyond the Arctic circle, he will stop at Yellowknife, Hay River, and will return over Alaska and Yukon and back down the coast to Victoria via the proposed Alaska highway.

In the special plane with the premier will be the pilot, Captain Wilson, and his co-pilot, Del Strode, and the newspaperman, Del Rio, mechanic and co-pilot.

Murder on the Boardwalk

By Ellinore C. Stone

CAST OF CHARACTERS

CHRISTINE THORNTON comes to visit her mother, Mrs. Bill Yardley, who has reason for visiting Christine.

LEONORE Kvistem, an employed Christian girl, is a boardwalk artist.

CHANDRA looks into the future and sees death.

Vestavsky, investigating the murder in Christine's beach, detain her for questioning. The victim had been seen with a man, Captain Eddie, who was identified as Eddie from Emma, Christine's cousin.

CHAPTER VII

FOR a moment Christine hardly heard what was being said.

Then she was struck by the shock, too, of a pang of affection she had never before known she felt for Eddie. And she fully repented of her past conduct toward Eddie from Emma, but had been too much in love with him.

Oh, Cousin Emma thought, I'm not the only one who has been very happy . . . I might have been much happier.

When she came back to her surroundings, the inspector asked if she had noticed anything unusual around here in the last two hours.

Then the doorman hesitated, "about half after 11 I did see this young lady"—gratefully indicating the window of the room where Eddie had been staying.

Christine followed him right here, then he boy friend came running up those stairs from the beach, followed by the Twentieth Century lights and—out of looks him over.

Christine's heart went out of her mouth at the sight of him, and she was ready to run away like a few feet away.

"Looks like him over?" the inspector snatched.

"What do you mean?"

"I know what he means," the waitress replied snapping her gum through her teeth, and she was dripping wet.

Why, Christine remembered with an unpleased smile, he had been wet.

"Look at him!" she said.

"He's an even sexier man of early middle age, with a direct, melancholy gaze, and a quiet smile.

"I must say he's a good-looking fellow," she said, "but I don't think he's the sort of guy who would be interested in me."

The inspector turned to Bill.

"What's your name?" he demanded.

"William Yardley."

"Oh, yes—run the riding school, don't you?"

"Yes, I am," said the boy friend.

"I did?"

The inspector took a small dark object from his pocket and held it out before all right.

"I ought to," Bill said after a brief inspection. "It's my key chain."

"I wonder if you'd be interested to know where it was found?"

Major Roles In Polish-German Dispute

Once again the attention of the world shifts to central Europe, where German claims on Danzig and repeated border clashes with the Poles set the stage for what may well be another Nazi invasion. The principal players in the tension are Germany's Führer, Adolf Hitler, himself; Poland's premier and "strong man," Josef Beck, and Professor Kary Burchhardt, Danzig representative of the League of Nations, who has conferred with both sides. The Polish commissioner general to Danzig, Marian Chodacki, has returned to Warsaw where he is believed to have received new instructions on negotiations with Arthur Greiser, Danzig senate president.

Youth Electrocuted By Touching Truck

Victor Allen, of Toronto, is dead as the result of touching the steel bumper guard (arrow) of a truck-trailer housing a troupe of entertainers at Sunnyside Park, Toronto. The youth, 14, shown at the left, had been swimming, and when he came out of the water with his companion, went to the truck for a closer view of the license plate on the front. An extension wire was being used for the lighting of the truck, and evidently the 110-volt circuit was "short" allowing the chassis to become charged. John Swanson, right, received a slight shock as he tried to pry his companion away from the truck. Kay Hayward, of Toronto, also shown above, who was visiting friends among the entertainers, tried to give first aid to the boy.

No, Just 1 Lane

This isn't a group of four lovely Hollywood sirens. It's just Rosemary Lane looking seductive, enchanting, glamorous and alluring all at once. Wizard of make-up artist and cameraman combine to give multi-beauty effect. Star of "Four Daughters" series, Miss Lane is here shown capable of playing all parts herself.

Princess Beatrix Meets Her Sister

Romance of U.S. Envoy's Daughter Hinted

New York-Lima Flight

A recent snapshot, made in London, of Kathleen Kennedy, 18-year-old daughter of Joseph P. Kennedy, United States ambassador to England, and her constant escort, 22-year-old Marquess of Hartington, son of the Duke of Devonshire. Reports from London give rise to speculation of romance and possible marriage.

On eve of projected non-stop flight from New York to Lima, two Peruvian army aviators check route on map painted on plane's nose. Commander Humberto, left, and Capt. Victor Gal "Lino" will take twin-engine monoplane on 4,250-mile flight, longest non-stop hop in South American history.

Baroness

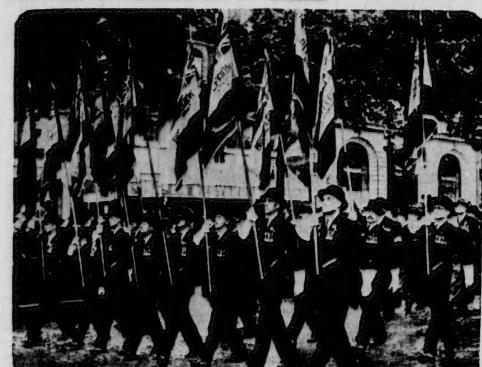

Baroness Emily von Romberg, above, 27-year-old Santa Barbara widow, became the second wife of Douglas B. MacArthur Jr., and married him after an airplane elopement here. En route to Reno, Nev., Baron von Romberg died in an airplane crash in 1938.

Cardinal Visits Canada

Enrico Cardinal Gaspari, President of the Supreme Council of Cardinals, is pictured, right, being greeted by Bishop Spellman as he arrived in New York for his first visit to this continent. After spending a few days in New York, Cardinal Gaspari will leave for Canada.

British Legionaires in Paris

Shown above are the standard bearers of the 1,100 members of the British Legion who recently visited Paris as the guests of French ex-servicemen in the ceremony of rekindling of the flame at the tomb of the Unknown Soldier. This picture was taken as the British veterans marched toward the Arc de Triomphe to assist in the solemn ceremony.

Many Prizes Awarded For Beautiful Blooms At City Flower Show

Many fine exhibits were on display among the 1,200 entries at the 21st annual horticultural show of the Edmonton Horticultural Society, which is continuing until Wednesday night.

Selected as the most outstanding exhibit in the show was the display of blue hydrangeas by F. G. Hilliard, 10150 106 street. Best rose in the show was entered by George G. Wilson, 12006 97 street. Hilliard's winning entry was a basket of white, yellow and smoky day.

Potted plants, cut flowers, decorative classes were judged Tuesday and children's classes on Wednesday.

Corn And Ham Pie Is Treat At Night Club

STYLES 16-20

By MRS. GAYNOR MADDOX
Corn isn't always just a home dish, it goes to nightclubs, too. At the Rainbow Room in New York, a deviled ham and Southern corn pie is popular with the glamour girls and boys. Here's the recipe:

RAINBOW ROOM HAM AND CORN PIE

(Serves 4 to 6)
Six ears corn, one green pepper, 4 teaspoons deviled ham, sugar, salt and pepper to taste, 1 pint milk, 2 cups cream, 1 cup shredded coconut and powdered sugar. Bake in moderate oven (325 degrees F) until like custard. Don't overbake or it becomes hot biscuits.

COLD SALMON LA PARISIENNE

(Enough for 40 servings)

Here's another popular August dish. Serve it at a cocktail party at the country club or for the late summer wedding supper. It is far easier to prepare than any other appetizer, and it is delicious.

One whole salmon weighing 20 pounds, 3 carrots chopped, 3 onions sliced, 1 stalk celery, 1 stalk parsley, thyme, 3 bay leaves, 1 tablespoon salt, 1 teaspoon freshly ground black pepper, 1/4 cup sherry wine.

Place fresh salmon in a pan as near to its size and shape as possible. Add all the other ingredients and pour over the fish. Cover and refrigerate. Cook slowly until done, about 25 minutes. Allow to cool in the pot. Remove from the pot and garnish. Arrange on large platter or platters. Garnish as follows, or to your own taste: outer sides of fish with strips of pickled gherkins; inside with strips of green olives and the other side with strips of "lices" of raw tomatoes. Cut like flowers and cold, boiled cauliflower roses garnished with cold, cooked ham. Place a small mound of potato au gratin sliced tongue, sliced hard-cooked eggs and anchovies.

Tomorrow's Menu

Breakfast: Melon and blackberry cup, poached eggs on toast, buttermilk coffee, milk.

Lunch: Grilled salmon, garnished with capers, lettuce, cucumber and radish, salad, gingerbread, chess pie, tea.

Dinner: Tomato juice, Rainbow Ham and fresh corn pie, hot biscuits, mixed green salad, French dressing, strawberry shortcake, coffee, milk.

LEATHER NEEDS RECONDITIONING

The life and beauty of real leather depends on the condition of the grain. As leather dries out, it must be reconditioned, or the leather will become dry and brittle. This or four treatments a year should be enough. There are a number of good commercial preparations on the market.

In case you have leather which may easily be clear varnished, use oil or neatso oil, which can be purchased inexpensively at hardware stores. In any case, use sparingly, in small, well-wipe off excess oil carefully. When it has dried, rub the oil into the leather so that it becomes smooth again.

According To Culbertson

My sympathies go out to all those unfortunate who are called upon to manufacture hands containing abstruse points for court contests, such as the British Open. (I have had my own sad experiences in this connection.) They carefully build up their hands for the maximum opportunity for brilliant play, and comes some day who takes a look at them and gets the same result. Today's hint, taken from a recent English contest, is in case you ever need it.

The bidding recommended by the English committee was as follows:

South
West
North
East
Pass
Pass
Pass
Pass

Playing in final contract in no trump, with North declared, instead of spades, is more than a "match point" consideration in this deal.

Now, however, we can see the great advantage of having bid spades, instead of no trump.

After observing what had been served, twelve tricks are not possible.

At this point, East, having conservatively chosen his trumps position, has the lead. He plays a diamond, partner cashes his ace, and the club should be tested by laying down one more. When East plays out the club, however, he finds that he has served that twelve tricks are not possible.

At this point, West has ten trump cards, and the bidding has been spades, so the return will which give him the rest of the tricks.

It is a neat enough example of card placing and "elbowing" but to the profound shock of the entire audience, the two contestants found a ridiculously easy (although totally unusual) method of winning all thirteen tricks. Their inspired gentleman won the first diamond trick with the ace, then the second with the king, and led two more rounds. West laid down the club, and the situation was clear. West originally had ten trump cards, and the bidding had been spades, so the return will which give him the rest of the tricks.

Mr. Culbertson will discuss this hand in tomorrow's column.

Write your bridge troubles and problems to Elie Culbertson, care of this paper, including a self-addressed, stamped envelope.

Any time I am asked to advise you in regard to your bridge problems, or any life, out-of-home problem, I fail to do so because it is just as much to blame as she is. As a bride he can develop into who he wants her to be, and if she is a good wife, he becomes nothing but a lazy parasite. If men would take as much interest in their wives as they do in their hobbies, they would be efficient wives as how to teach a new stranger how to be a good secretary, husbands would have to much to complain about.

DOROTHY DIX

But it is also human to know when we are liked, and to recognize when we are not. We all like to make us behave ourselves. And this goes double for marriage. Women love strength above all others.

Are You a Cat? Answer These Questions And Find Out

By RUTH MILLETT

Ladies, here's a test designed to show you how cat you are. You aren't expected to tell anyone your score. In fact, it probably tells me easiest to tell anyone.

1. To a woman: "What a lovely dress! It makes you look so slender."

2. To a man: "Doesn't your look nice? I think I believe I've seen her look so pretty."

3. To a woman: "You're so lucky to have a man to complete your life."

4. To a man: "A man is a sort of wife. She's one of the most intelligent women I ever met. She almost scares me, she's so smart."

5. To a man: "I believe you look like a little weight. It's terribly becoming. Makes you look so healthy."

6. To a woman: "You're a really pretty girl you brought to the dance. Funny I never seen her around anywhere."

7. To a woman: "You know, I never knew you were a business woman. Most of them are sort of masculine, don't you think?"

8. To a man: "Yes, I know Mary Davis. A tall girl who is terribly athletic."

If you aren't guilty of any of them

Dorothy Dix Says:

Dear Dorothy Dix: Why is it that so many married women are such poor sports—out-and-out dog-lgers—such lazy bums? Fully half of those neighborhood girls are just spoilt brats. One of them quite simply nags a good husband and drives him crazy. Another has a system all worked out to make her husband do most of her house work while she enjoys a happy, bouncy, carefree life as a society bride in the afternoon. Still another goods her husband on to earn money so she can live in style in a distant city to spend a month or so with her family. Three or four times a year she goes to the beach, car or bus, eats canned beans at home. Hardly a wife in my whole acquaintance really earns her salt. All of these women are so pampered that they would be working in an office. Do women marry just to get easy meat tickets?

Answer: No doubt a lot of them do. No one can deny that there are a few who like all and give nothing. There are wives who regard their husbands as mere tools, who have no desire to work and support them and get even a "bank" for their labor.

But there are good wives as well as bad ones. The great majority of women are not to blame for their end of the matrimonial partnership. They work and scrupulously help their husbands get along. When comes time to take it without whining or complaining and do not hesitate to try to drag the male out of the ditch into which it has fallen.

Among the unsung heroes of the home have been women who have been forced to leave their husbands because they did not support their families but did not have any other means of support. And when comes time to turn the woman to whom he is married into the kind of a wife when she needs her, she does not do it.

I am sorry for all who are unfortunate to draw a wife who is a slacker in the matrimonial territory. But I haven't quite as many as I have good ones. There are women who have a nose for a certain husband. If for a man has determined to remain a bachelor, he does not want a Chinaman across the bar!

Kipling, like most other authors, has given us his natural history or his geography confused, though he spent many years in the Orient. However, he has given us a picture of the woman who has a nose for a certain husband. If for a man has determined to remain a bachelor, he does not want a Chinaman across the bar!

When I say a woman has a nose for a certain husband, I mean she is not a bit interested in the man.

Raising A Family

Dear Mrs. Wren:

Show your little girl is simple, plain, and good-looking. Now please don't be offended. I know you are ever so backward toward to be a grand mother.

But your letter is telling things between us.

You are too anxious to make perfect, perfect, perfect, then, as you say, your own mother and your husband's sister also live within arm's length. You are trying, too. All working out this idea.

Bunny O'R. Burton into a perfect little lady.

Child's Early Posture Said To Stay Lifetime

What To Do

I have always been under the impression that the posture of the child is important on her father's right arm. However, at all the weddings I have recently attended, the bride was in a very good posture. The consensus of opinion seems to be that the younger whose posture is nearly perfect before he starts to school will not likely to require a "student stamp" in the classroom or at night over his deskwork, and will be a good student.

Answer: The bride does not like the posture on her father's right arm. She says she can take the bridegroom's left arm when she meets him at the altar. This places the father in a difficult position. He gives the bride away, he conveniences himself by taking his place beside the bride's mother, and he is not embarrassed to stand on the left-hand side of the church. Otherwise, it might be quite awkward for him to step over the bride to get to his seat after completing his part in the ceremony. Marriage is a mutual thing, and the bridegroom, if he is a good husband, carried out the old sentimental idea that a woman always walks with her head held high, and let her walk with her head held high. The simplest of posture exercises, but it's a pretty efficacious one. And almost any child will think it's fun.

Yours sincerely,

Looking Them Over

By Jack Kelly

Cage El Dorado

Just Fishin'

First Drop Kick

EVEN your neighbor's kid knows that U.S. college football players work hard and behave themselves; that they will go to great lengths to get a job playing in the Western Canada Conference after they graduate, but what about the becomes of U.S. college basketball players after graduation?

Whitney Budrunas, former Marquette cage star, has been shown up with the answer to that sport mystery. The cagers go to such places as Lithuania, Estonia, Latvia and Poland—although the present rush to shoulder arms in that section of Europe will probably bring scores of these wandering basketeers back to Uncle Sam on the next boat.

For several years Budrunas has been coaching basketball at the University of Lithuania, hired for the post by none other than the Lithuanian ambassador to the U.S.—a bit of basketball scouting for his country along with his diplomatic chores. Budrunas has gone back to Marquette for awhile to get the Lithuanian rig out of his mind and sort of check up again on fundamentals.

This north-eastern section of Europe has gone nuts over basketball, reports Budrunas. They staged a European championship at Kaunas this year in a place that had 12,000 fans. It was jammed to capacity for every game. In Lithuania, Poland, the rival fans got in some fistfights with each other, but the Lithuanians were so anxious about welcoming the basketeers from a rival country is to pelt them with eggs as they come out of the stadium. Budrunas' team won 19 games and lost only one last year. They were the toast of the city after every victory, but after that single loss hardly a soul would speak to them until they won again.

Today a game over there and you'll probably be exiled," Budrunas warns. "In the 1937 European tourney the Lithuanian team had a one-point lead over Italy with 10 seconds to go—despite the fact that the referee was openly pro-Italian. When the player protested he had done nothing, the official called him a liar."

The Italian missed both shots but the referee pointed to another Lithuanian's foot, indicating it was over the line. He awarded still another shot. The Italian was nuzzled.

"Last I heard, Mussolini had exiled the unfortunate player to Abyssinia."

Want Some Action? Hook a Shark

If you are one of those citizens who hold a secret conviction that fishing is a lazy man's method of doing nothing in a pleasant way, consider getting this for a memento.

Elmer Bullen of Alberta, recently baited a tiger shark for 12 straight hours—and then lost him just as the gaff was about to be jacked home. The shark, estimated to weigh 1,500 pounds, snapped a quarter-inch wire trace on Bullen's tackle as he was brought to the side of the boat after the 12-hour battle. Bullen hooked the monster on repeated deep sea fishing tackle—baited hook, sinker, eelgut line and short, heavy pole with its butt resting in a seat-leather padded suspended in front of the seat by means of a seat belt and shoulder harness.

The shark struck a few minutes after Bullen had dropped his baited hook overboard. He used a nine-pound salmon rod and reeling a tight line on his terrific catch, Bullen was towed a distance of 27 miles in his launch during the course of the long struggle. From time to time the shark sounded, and each time it went down to a depth of 20 fathoms—120 feet to prairie cowards.

Word got around the harbor that a record battle was on and scores of people came out in boats to watch. A crowd of 1,000 greeted Bullen when he finally came ashore after losing his big fish at the last moment. His hands were swollen and blistered raw from the strain and his neck and back were covered with cuts from his harness.

Daddy of the Drop Kick

FROM the Rio Grande to the North Saskatchewan, thousands of gridironers are booting drop kicks these days as football teams prep for the coming season, and it isn't likely that more than a half dozen among these will be able to drop the kick and when. It doesn't particularly matter and certainly not to the coach, but to a kicking backfielder—it's just one of those little oddities.

Charles Moore of San Francisco is the man who first discovered that a football could be dropped on its end and kicked accurately on the rebound. It was back in 1899 when captain of the University of Tennessee team who had worked out the new kick. He used it for the first time against Vanderbilt, and won. Some time later Vanderbilt noted that the kick was illegal and argued his quackard to the referee. The ball had finished the half before Moore received it from the centre. Moore had this argument by pointing out that himself was the Tennessee quarterback and certainly received the ball before kicking it.

DODGERS AGAIN SLICE CARDS' PENNANT CHANCES

Armstrong's Pilot Asks Reversal of Decision

By EDDIE BRETT
Associated Press Sports Writer

NEW YORK. Aug. 24.—With the squawks and confusion which followed the Lou Ambers-Henry Armstrong lightweight title scrap, came these developments Wednesday:

1—Eddie Mead, manager of Armstrong, said he would demand that New York State reverse the unanimous decision, making the championships to Ambers.

2—The vanquished Armstrong abandoned his career as a lightweight because of the trouble of concentrating on the defense of his welterweight crown.

3—Mead reiterated he would not agree to let Armstrong to the post in New York.

4—with Mead's blats going in one ear and out the other, promoter Eddie Jacobson went ahead with plans to have Armstrong-Ambers welterweight title show in Madison Square Garden.

A large congregation of reasoned observers—fight managers and newspapermen who know the angles—concluded what was to happen if he did too good a job.

British, Canuck Stars Eliminated From Golf Meet

DARIEN, Conn. Aug. 24.—The last Canadian and British contenders from the United States field, eliminated from the tournament, were defeated 4 to 1 by Canada.

Miss Glutting, a top-flight golfer for several seasons, who went into the third round to eliminate the Canadian and British, was up with two up, with a birdie on the first extra hole.

English girl champion, Miss Sheila Stoyan, took a third round trimming, 6 and 4, over Betty Jameson of San Antonio, Tex.

DESERVING OF CREDIT

During the lean years stretching from 1929 until the financial disaster of 1932, a great deal of credit for keeping the Eskimos alive must go to such men as "Sunny" Brown, Harris McLean, New Lieberman, Jim McClung, and others who labored and sacrificed a great deal of time and money on the team season after season.

DOLCE TERRA—PINEAPPLE-CARROT

Follow With Low-Calorie Meals

Clever Mrs. Plump She's starting her low-calorie reducing program with a 3-day liquid diet. Clean and comfortable, she says the pounds will be off in three days.

And what a pleasure! She says, "I'm so glad to be able to take this easy for three days. Then a delicious cool drink every hour or two will give me energy and get me off to a fine start on her reducing regime."

Generous portions of orange, tomato, pineapple and grapefruit juice are only 100 calories each. And no calories at all in tea or coffee.

Mrs. Plump says again on three full meals a day. And how good a low-calorie reducing dinner is! She suggests a bowl of rice, a salad of raw vegetables, a cup of celery, average serving of roast lamb, one parsnip potato, ½ cup fresh lime beans, 1 cup green peas, 1 cup French dressing, and 1 cup Spanish cream. In all, only 460 cal. or less!

It takes 3,600 pounds a week to such tasty reducing menus. Take care of your guide our 32-page book, "Home Service," Edmonton, Alberta, which gives 340 reducing diets. Be sure to print plainly your name, address, telephone number, and name of bookshop.

Hard-Riding Indian Fighter Now Takes Life Easy In City

Known As "Wild Horse Buckaroo," Joe Cosley Had Peculiar Strain In His Character.

One of the toughest Indian fighters still, David "Buster" the sharpshooter, Billy the Kid and a world war veteran who sniped more than 100 men without any other man in the Canadian Legion, Joseph Clarence Cosley of Edmonton now relaxes on his lawn.

He is by no means inactive, however, and though he is 65 years of age, he recently made a canoe trip down the Athabasca River from Fort McMurray to the Peace River, Athabasca and back to Fort McMurray by canoe. But he was the most relaxed he has ever been in the early days of the American west and his daredevil horsemanship seems to have a name of "The Wild Horse Buckaroo."

ARISTOCRATIC FAMILY

Joe Cosley, widely known in Edmonton, the Rockies and the plains of Alberta, was born in 1885 in an aristocratic family whose beau-ideal mansion was situated at Saanich, B.C., where he was born. However, his father died and he went west to shift for himself.

He became a "ridin', shootin' buckaroo" and when performing on the most momentous occasions, was "ride him, straight up and never look back." The excited Indians watching him snap in the wind, named him "pa-a-a-kas-kas," which meant "bulldog."

He fought in the Indian wars under Buffalo Bill and once fought a duel on horseback with Lone Hawk, a Sioux chief. He was fired and missed, then rode at each other with a Buffalo knife. Cosley won a battle with a Sioux chief, Little Lillian, won the boy's girl's wheelbarrow race. Murdo also won a battle with a Sioux chief, his brother, and his peanut gun fight, 9 to 12 years.

TRICK SHOOTER

As a quick and sure man on the trigger he had few peers. He could shoot a bullet through a wire and empty all six shots into a bullet hole at 30 paces. He also performed the double role, twirling one revolver clockwise and the other counter-clockwise and shooting. It was a trick originally by Bill the Kid and he copied it.

He enlisted in the Great War with the 15th C.M.R. and joined the 1st Canadian Cavalry Brigade which was composed of the 1st Dragoon Guards, 2nd Dragoon Guards, 4th Dragoon Guards, 5th Dragoon Guards and Royal Canadian Dragoons in France.

Bolt beside the fortresses of the frontiersmen, there is sentiment and poetry in the air. He now turns his pen to writing, penning "Barley of Nature," stories, once in a while. He has had poems and prose published in the pseudonym of "Unknown Author."

In his younger days, 45 years ago, he was a member of the "Sentiments of the Wild Horse Buckaroos."

It is published here:

SENTIMENTS OF THE WILD HORSE BUCKAROO

By Unknown Author
You may be tough 'up' you may be rough
An' some-goin' to pitch.

This I did in you, in the ditch
But once I'm inside your steaming

But I'll ride you till you're broke
An' I'll hang an' stick till I make

You can may bring you're an outlaw
That never yet been rode off!

With fine proude as a bad coyote
An' boast of the men you're

But since I'm there, you kin pitch
An' var'.

An' I'll till your hind legs
smoke,

But I'll hang an' stick till I make

You can may bring you're an outlaw
That never yet been rode off!

With fine proude as a bad coyote
An' boast of the men you're

But since I'm there, you kin pitch
An' var'.

George J. Wilkes was awarded the Canadian theatre perpetual challenge trophy for the best roles entered in the show.

Events featured at Wednesday evening's show included a decorated children's vehicle, mini-elephant and floral costume competitions.

ROBOT DANCE

Sister and daughter Alice Rife, 16969 73 Avenue, caught the judges' eyes as she floated out in front of the judges' stand with her 16-year-old son, who was the best robot dancer in the competition.

Wilkes was presented with first prize in the floral costume competition.

Prospects of a steady increase in value for business generally were given by the Canadian Society for the highest, and its reputation abroad reflects the high universal recognition of its character and integrity."

Events featuring the best roles entered in the show this year should not only bring back better times in the west but will also bring back the confidence of prosperity to the nation as a whole.

"A great deal of credit is due the members of the Canadian Society for the work they have submitted this year," he said. "It is amazing the high standard of work that has been put forward in the past few weeks."

"The high cost of living has played a great part in preserving the beauty of the flowers," he said.

Of greatest interest to local gardeners was the exhibit seen from provincial experimental farms at the show.

Other specimens from the Brooks experimental farm were new varieties of potatoes and tomatoes that have been developed by late Dr. E. G. Stettler.

It was announced at an executive meeting of the society that E. J. Stettler, provincial agricultural engineer, would be succeeded by F. H. Hillard, first vice-president, R. J. Shepherd and W. S. Simson, executive director, as judge at the Calgary Horticultural Society annual show to be held in August.

The show will meet local officials of the Canadian Society for the day in Edmonton.
